Prevention of misuse of penal provisions relating to crimes against women

It has been observed that in cases relating to crimes against women, particularly those registered under section 498 A IPC, very frequently, the in-laws of the victims, who are of advanced or young ages, are also arraigned as accused. Such family members are arrested without proper investigation of the case, vitiating thereby the interest of justice. The following instructions should, therefore, be complied with to prevent possible misuse of the relevant penal provisions:-

1. The main accused of the criminal case should be arrested only with the approval of the district superintendent of police if evidence is, prima-facie, available.
2. Investigation regarding the involvement of other accused persons should proceed expeditiously and if their involvement is confirmed after the supervision by the SP or the concerned SDPO/ DySP, he/she should be arrested only with the approval of the SP.
3. The concerned SDPO/DySP should supervise such cases on a priority basis and submit the supervision note within a period of 3 days incorporating a clear opinion on the point of involvement of each accused. SsP should strive to personally supervise sensitive and serious criminal cases involving crimes against women.

This issues with the approval of DGP, Bihar.
